Taki Flevaris is a litigator and advisor to public and private clients in the Pacific Northwest. He has litigated numerous cases involving federal, state, and local governments across a wide variety of subject areas—including housing, campaign finance, elections, education, free speech, defamation, public records, eminent domain, class actions, contracts, insurance coverage, antitrust, environmental law, real estate, and taxation—often with a constitutional or political dimension.

Taki also regularly advises clients on constitutional, statutory, and regulatory compliance issues, the scope of governmental authority, and internal policy formulation and implementation. Taki provides responsive, efficient, and effective service with an eye toward the client’s particular needs and circumstances. He has extensive experience with various complex legal frameworks and can serve as an invaluable resource to clients aiming to resolve ongoing disputes or to prevent them from arising in the first place.

Taki has developed a breadth of experience and depth of understanding in a variety of subject areas to assist public and private clients with their most pressing and difficult problems. Much of his work focuses on the following five core areas:

- Housing. Taki represents a wide variety of clients on emerging housing issues, including state housing finance agencies, local housing authorities, cities, and other public bodies. He has litigated successfully against the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, private mortgage companies, and other participants in governmental housing programs. He advises public clients on navigating federal housing programs and regulations, disability accommodation requirements, and state housing laws. In the midst of a growing housing crisis, Taki has also helped cities across Washington develop, and resolve disputes over, policies and practices for addressing unauthorized encampments on public property.
- Campaigns, Elections, and Ethics. Taki represents candidates, elected officials, caucus committees, county committees, ballot initiative campaigns, and politically active nonprofit organizations across the state with campaign requirements, electoral rules, and ethics standards. He assists political campaigns with finance activities and reporting, in administrative proceedings, and in litigation. He also advises governmental officials, agencies, and private clients facing complex ethics, reporting, or compliance issues. Taki has successfully defended numerous candidates and political committees in response to citizen complaints, before the Public Disclosure Commission, and in investigations by the Attorney General's Office. Taki also works with state and local initiatives, including drafting, constitutional analysis, and legal challenges.

- Education. Taki regularly assists school districts with regulatory compliance, policy development and implementation, and dispute resolution, especially regarding constitutional issues such as freedom of speech or religion. He keeps districts informed of pertinent legal developments and helps update their regulations and procedures over time on varied subjects such as graduation standards, alternative learning experiences, and student journalism. He also advises districts on discrete and complex legal problems as they arise, including compliance with constitutional, statutory, or regulatory requirements and resolving concerns raised by parents, community members, employees, or special interest groups. Taki also helps districts resolve discrete disputes as they arise, early and efficiently when possible, or through litigation if necessary.
- Speech, Religion, Race, and Gender. Taki has extensive experience litigating and advising on issues related to freedom of speech and association, religious rights, and race and gender in government. He regularly advises clients on a wide variety of complex disputes implicating these issues, ranging from public employee use of social media, to the treatment of religion in governmental aid programs, to policies on preferred names and pronouns. He has successfully defended public agencies against challenges to reasonable regulations of constituent communications, protest activities, and professional licensing. Taki has also litigated extensively on issues of racial bias, discrimination, and equity, and has advised many public clients on compliance with Washington's statutory requirements for public employment, education, and contracting known as I-200.
- Public Records. Taki regularly counsels public agencies on managing and responding to requests for public records under Washington's Public Records Act. He has assisted various agencies develop and implement effective policies for addressing the most complex and burdensome requests. He has also successfully defended agencies against legal challenges arising from such requests. Taki also regularly assists clients to obtain public records.

Prior to joining Pacifica, Taki worked as an Advocacy Fellow at the Korematsu Center for Law and Equality at Seattle University School of Law, as a litigation associate at K&L Gates, and as a law clerk to the Honorable Steven C. González of the Washington State Supreme Court.

Taki is actively involved in pro bono work and civic engagement. He has written and presented regarding equal access and equal treatment in our justice system and in the legal profession, advocated on behalf of various civic organizations acting as amicus curiae in state and federal courts, and litigated on behalf of immigrants seeking asylum from persecution before federal immigration courts, the Board of Immigration Appeals, and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Taki also is active in various professional and community organizations.

Prior to his career in the law, Taki spent time coaching the Reed College speech and debate team and studying flamenco guitar. He now spends much of his time outside the law exploring the wonders of life with his spouse and two young children. He also plays basketball, is an avid fan of his hometown team the Portland Trailblazers, and continues to hold out hope for the return of the SuperSonics to Seattle.
